ANSWER: Appeals have been granted as long as 20 years after convictions, with the defendant being granted a new trial. Because of this, many officers retain their notes indefinitely.

75. What are some of the advantages of videos?

ANSWER: Some advantages of videos are: They accurately represent the crime scene and evidence; they are able to show distance more clearly than photos; and they have sound capability to more fully document what is being seen.

76. What are some of the disadvantages of videos?

ANSWER: A disadvantage of videos is that many people mistakenly believe that no training in videotaping is necessary. Some common mistakes include shooting without planning ahead, shooting too much, poor focusing, zooming too much, jerky camera movements, including unintentional audio, and failing to use a tripod. These errors can lead to poor video quality and a diminished value in the video's documentation of the crime scene.

77. What is immersive imaging?

ANSWER: Immersive imaging is a type of 360-degree photographic view. Crime Scene Virtual Tour (CSVV) software lets jurors virtually step into a crime scene. The software allows the scene to be viewed from any angle with zoom, pan, tilt, and rotate features. If a witness claims to have been standing at a certain place, an investigator can virtually go there to view that perspective.

78. What kind of camera is useful for photographing trace evidence such as bloodstains and tool marks?

ANSWER: Fingerprint cameras are specially constructed to take pictures of fingerprints without distortion. This camera can also photograph trace evidence such as bloodstains and tool marks.

80. Imagine you are at the scene of a homicide. The victim was murdered on the sidewalk in front of a public building on a busy street. Briefly record the photographs you need to take and in what order they should be taken.

ANSWER: First, photograph the general area. This would include the street scene, the sidewalk, the front of the building, and any other general areas in the vicinity of the crime scene. Then photograph specific areas, which would include the placement of the body, from all views. Specific areas might also include the entrance to the building, if the victim was shot going into or coming out of the building, or a nearby parked car, if the victim was getting out of or into the car. Finally, photograph specific objects of evidence such as the weapon, any bullet casing or shells, blood stains or spatter, articles of clothing, or any other type of physical evidence. Exterior shots should be taken first because they are the most subject to alteration by weather and security violations.

81. When would it be appropriate to use surveillance photography?

ANSWER: Surveillance photography establishes the identity of a subject or records criminal behavior without the photographer's presence being known to the subject. The photographs or video can help identify a suspect's associates, destroy an alibi, plan a raid, or develop a surveillance plan. With a well-thought-out plan, surveillance tapes can potentially be a "real force multiplier for law enforcement agencies of any size."

82. What type of items would one photograph in a laboratory?

ANSWER: Not all investigative photography is done in the field. Sometimes objects are photographed in a laboratory with special equipment that is too large, delicate, or expensive to use in the field. For example, infrared film photographs can reveal the contents of unopened envelopes, bloodstains, alterations to documents, variations in types of ink, and residue near where a bullet has passed through clothing. X-ray cameras can detect loaded dice.

Microphotography takes pictures through a microscope and can help identify minute particles of evidence such as hairs or fibers. In contrast, macrophotography enlarges a subject. For example, a fingerprint or a tool mark can be greatly enlarged to show the details of ridges or striations.

84. Imagine you are at the scene of a car accident involving two vehicles and a pedestrian. What evidence would you sketch?

ANSWER: All crash scenes should be sketched after photographs are taken and before anything is moved. Sketch the entire scene, the objects, and the evidence. For a car accident with two vehicles and a pedestrian, a sketch should include the following, at a minimum: placement of the vehicles, the pedestrian, the stop light or stop sign, the lanes and direction of traffic, any obstacles (visual or physical) in the area, and all permanent fixtures such as buildings, benches, planters, etc.

85. Briefly outline the six steps in making a sketch of a crime scene.

ANSWER: To sketch a crime scene, the six steps are:

- observe and plan
- measure distances and outline the area
- plot objects and evidence within the outline
- take notes and record details
- identify the sketch with a legend and a scale
- reassess the sketch.

86. When creating a scale drawing of a crime scene, what does an officer need to consider in order for the drawing to be admissible in court?

ANSWER: An admissible sketch is drawn or personally witnessed by an investigator and accurately portrays a crime scene. A scale drawing also is admissible if the investigating officer drew it or approved it after it was drawn and if it accurately represents the rough sketch. The rough sketch must remain available as evidence.
