- 41. Answers will vary but should include four of the following strategies: spend time thinking about what you can learn from difficult situations you faced and overcame; give yourself credit for good choices that you made, and think about how you can build upon these successes; recall experiences when things did not work out, and try and think through the mistakes that you made and how you could have done better; seek out individuals, both on and off campus, who are positive and ask them where their optimism comes from; take advantage of the opportunities you will get in your college success course to explore the effect your attitude has on the outcomes you want; and be mindful of your attitude as you move through the weeks of the term. See The Importance of Motivation, Attitude, and Mindset.

42. A growth mindset means that you are willing to try new approaches and that you believe you can change. A fixed mindset means that you believe your characteristics and abilities, either positive or negative, are not going to change through any adjustments to your behavior or effort. See The Importance of Motivation, Attitude, and Mindset.
43. Answers will vary but should include four of the following strategies: make connections; avoid seeing crises as problems that can't be overcome; accept that change is a part of living; move toward your goals; take decisive actions; look for opportunities for self-discovery; develop a positive view of yourself; keep things in perspective; maintain a hopeful outlook; and take care of yourself. See Resilience.
44. Perceiving emotions involves the ability to monitor and identify feelings correctly and to determine why you feel the way you do. Managing emotions is based on the belief that feelings can be modified, and involves putting yourself in the right mood to handle a specific situation. See Understanding Emotional Intelligence.
45. Managing priorities is important because when you successfully make time in your days and weeks for what is most important to you, your emotional health benefits. You feel more confident, more in control, and more capable of handling your life with a positive attitude and others with patience. If you cannot keep what is most important to you at the top of your list of priorities, your attitude becomes more negative, you feel stressed out, and you have less patience for other people. See Understanding Emotional Intelligence.
